

AN IMPARTIAL GOVERNOR.

The interview in yesterday's APPEAL with Governor Colcord in regard to Pine Nut has established him in the eyes of a thousand readers as an exceedingly fair minded man. He has studied the possibility of over-anxious people going off the track of investigation in their excitement.

His remarks were all carefully weighed, and showed that he intended all for the best interests of the people.

His conservative manner in explaining the case to the people of this State will do more for the mines in the future than a thousand widely miscalculated rantings during temporary excitement.

While the San Francisco press quoted him broadcast throughout the country, an impression prevailed that the Governor had been in Pine Nut recently.

Many people knew that he had not been there and hence wondered at his explanation of the case.

Had the reporter used the first words of Mr. Colcord when he stated that he knew nothing about the present discovery, then an entirely different face would have been put on the opinion.

Since the appearance of his interview in the APPEAL he is thoroughly understood, and any intelligent man recognizes the advantages of his care in the matter and appreciate the desire on his part to give the world a little good advice.

Pine Nut, by this time, is known throughout the United States, and developments will be watched with interest by many thousands of people.

Should the reports be verified when some depth is reached, then the time for true excitement will commence and be lasting.

Mary Anderson says that Sarah Siddons was one of the greatest actresses who ever lived. How does she know? We can tell that Homer was a great poet, because we can read his sublime epics. We know that Michael Angelo was a master painter, because his work still exists to attest that fact. We can testify that Edman Burk was a great orator, for every school boy has read his brilliant impeachment of Warren Hastings. But we know of the merits of the actors and actresses of the past only from tradition. The faunners of a century ago would probably not be accepted to-day. They were false to nature and untrue to art. From what we can learn of them, they were stilted, ranting, affected and mouthing. They ignored Shakespear's advice and tore passions to tatters. David Garrick and Edman Kean to-day would not pass muster by the side of our own incomparable Edwin Booth.—Bee.

Where are all the ambitious brainy young men of this glorious country? There are sixty vacancies in West Point, with pay for receiving the best education to be had anywhere, and no applications. It is true that a dolt has no place at West Point, but any ordinary young man with diligence can go through the course. Have brass buttons and a gun lost their charms?

The Jews are the greatest people of the earth to-day. Without a land or nation they control the great money centers of the world. Seldom, if ever, a Jew is a pauper or tramp. While they are persecuted by nearly every nation on earth, they are a prosperous people and nothing is to good for them. The Jews are truly God's chosen people.—Bulletin.

Secretary Foster is fond of cards, pool and horse racing, and it is therefore probable that he missed his destiny in not becoming at once a Sunday school superintendent, and a bank cashier. He can never accumulate enough at his present job to make a trip to Canada worth while.—Oakland Times.
